Pixley, Bobcats On National TV Tonight

When she was a little girl, Madison Pixley dreamed of being a cheerleader. Well, the little girl's dreams came true, and tonight she will be cheering on national television!

Madison cheers for the University of the Ozarks Bobcats, and tonight the Lady Bobcats will make their fourth appearance in the NAIA Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

The Lady Bobcats will make their fourth appearance in the national title game in school history when they battle Northwestern on Tuesday at 8 p.m. in a game televised live by CBS Sports Network. George Wilson, who has been the coach for all three of the Ozarks' title game losses, and the Bobcats are hoping for better luck the fourth time around.

Tuesday's National Championship game is a rematch of the 2008 title contest when Northwestern won 82-75. Ozarks also lost in the championship in 2006 to Hastings (Neb.) and in 2007 to Indiana Wesleyan.

Madison is the daughter of Amy and Aaron Pixley of Dexter and is a 2011 graduate of Dexter High School, where she was was a basketball cheerleader, a varsity volleyball player and ran track.

The CBS Sports Network is channel 363 on New Wave cable, as well as channel 613 on DirecTV and channel 152 on DISH Network.
