APRIL 23RD 2014 BY DEE LOFLIN

Bernie, Missouri - Over 3,000 motivated sixth through twelfth graders compete in National History Day in Missouri each year. On April 26th approximately 500 students who have advanced from regional competitions throughout Missouri will gather at the state competition on the University of Missouri campus to showcase their exemplary work.

Students who won were also eligible for the state level History Day.

Each National History Day in Missouri project is unique, a result of extensive research and creativity from an individual student or group. The program encourages young scholars to present their findings their way through documentaries, exhibits, papers, performances, or websites.

Many individuals rank the opportunity for student leadership, empowerment, and growth as one of the most important aspects of National History Day in Missouri, including Gary Kremer, executive director of The State Historical Society of Missouri (SHSMO), which sponsors the program in partnership with the Missouri Humanities Council.

“The impact on students is tremendous and well worth the investment from the Society and from teachers and parents,” Kremer said. “Students build confidence, develop their critical thinking, and learn important communication skills. National History Day in Missouri prepares them for college and beyond.”

A national evaluation of National History Day found students who participate:

Outperform their peers on state standardized tests, not only in social studies but also in reading, science, and math.

Are better writers who write with a purpose and a real voice while marshaling solid evidence to support their point of view.

Are critical thinkers who digest, analyze, and synthesize information.

Gain 21st-century skills, learning how to collaborate with team members, talk to experts, manage their time, and persevere.

To get involved in National History Day in Missouri, contact The State Historical Society of Missouri at 573.882.7083.

The Bernie community is extremely proud of these students we wish them well on their future endeavors.
