Springfield, Missouri - Jason Brasier, a Willow Springs native, and his business partner, Brittney Greer, a Dexter native, own American Wasteland Entertainment, based out of Springfield, Missouri.

American Wasteland Entertainment, a Springfield, Missouri-based production company, released the first episode of the second season of it's award-winning web series, today: Drifter: Lonesome Highway. The second season of Drifter was shot locally in the southwest Missouri area.

Episode one of Lonesome Highway and all of Season 1 can be viewed at <http://www.drifterseries.com>

Drifter: Lonesome Highway begins about four weeks after the end of Drifter: Broken Road as she continues her quest for vengeance. Lonesome Highway takes us deeper into Drifter's mind and exposes more of the pain that has led her on her quest.

Lonesome Highway comes out on the heels of numerous awards and recognitions that Broken Road received and is already receiving praise:

- "Drifter: Lonesome Highway is Gritty and Compelling storytelling with a rocking

soundtrack!" ~Paul Awad -Director of Thurston - The Western Web Series

· "Graphic, grimy, and gripping. Buckle your seat belts Drifter fans, because Season 2 is non stop crazy." ~Michael Caruso~ Producer of DeVanity

· "These strong female characters in this series are a breath of fresh air." Larry Little - Geekykool.com

· "Bigger, tougher and more badass." -Matt Smolen- Director/Producer of Chris & Josh

At the 2013 LA Webfest, Drifter: Broken Road (season 1) received the following awards: Outstanding Lead Actress, Outstanding Composer, Outstanding Writing, & Outstanding Directing. Drifter: Broken Road was also named an "Advance Selection" to the Marseille, France Webfest.
