Daily Devotional - Friday, December 7, 2018 - Good Discipline

Hebrews 12:4-11

FRIDAY

To gain a deeper understanding of the loving nature of God's discipline, try to remember your own childhood. Maybe you heard these familiar words from a parent or guardian: "This hurts me more than it hurts you." Back then, you probably did not appreciate or even believe that sentiment. Nor did you comprehend the true meaning until you became an adult. Discipline is painful for both the recipient and the administrator, but the benefits outweigh the suffering.

Good parents love their children enough to look beyond their immediate comfort and work toward a more beneficial long-term goal—the transformation of foolish, self-centered juveniles into wise, loving adults. The heavenly Father is working in the same way to mature His children. Divine discipline is a necessary part of the process and an expression of His goodness and love.

Although God knows the most effective means of disciplining us, the outcome is influenced by our attitudes and responses. We can choose to submit and be trained by it, or we can rebel and waste the opportunity to grow in Christlikeness. God is always working for our good, but by choosing our own way, we reject His best and grieve His heart.

If you don't align your thinking with the truth of Scripture, the pain and suffering of divine discipline may produce the sour fruit of a bitter attitude, an angry heart, and a distorted view of God. Instead, trust in His perfect will and choose to be teachable. He will produce the fruit of righteousness in your life.

Daily Devotional - Thursday, December 6, 2018 - A Revolutionary Announcement

Daily Devotional - Thursday, December 6, 2018 - A Revolutionary Announcement

THURSDAY

Familiarity sometimes robs us of awe and wonder, and this is true of both simple and profound events in life. As Christians, we are familiar with the idea of Jesus' resurrection, but can you imagine the impact it had on those who first heard about it?

When Peter gave his first sermon, he boldly declared, "You ... put Him to death. But God raised Him up again" (Acts 2:23-24). Imagine what a revolutionary statement that was. The assembled crowd knew of Jesus and the miracles He'd performed, and some may even have joined in shouting, "Crucify Him!" (Matt. 27:22). Yet here was one of Jesus' own followers claiming that the Christ couldn't be held by death's power.

Some may have considered the disciples' early accounts of the resurrection to be idle tales, but Pentecost changed all that when God visited mankind in a way He never had before. The crowd witnessed something historic as each person heard the gospel in his or her own language (Acts 2:8-11).

Faith took root in 3,000 repentant hearts when the message of the Lord's death and resurrection was preached. Those new believers were baptized as a public statement of their trust in Jesus as the Messiah and Savior, who died to pay the penalty for their sins.

The revolution sparked by the Holy Spirit that day spread across the world and into the modern era, transforming individuals and the cultures in which they lived. Today the task of proclaiming the death and resurrection of Jesus falls to us. As with the first church, we can trust the Lord to add to our number those who are being saved.

Daily Devotional - Wednesday, December 5, 2018 - Giving and Receiving Exhortation

Daily Devotional - Wednesday, December 5, 2018 - Giving and Receiving Exhortation

1 Thessalonians 5:12-15

WEDNESDAY

05

Most of us are much more willing to receive instruction from our pastors than from fellow members of the congregation. Yet today's passage gives us some surprising advice regarding how a church is to operate.

First of all, we are told to appreciate and esteem our leaders who have charge over us in the Lord. They are our shepherds, who feed us with the Word of God and care for our spiritual health and growth.

However, this passage also describes the responsibilities we have to admonish, encourage, and help one another in the church. We are not just spectators but are told to be actively involved in helping each other grow in the faith. Therefore, let's consider some ways we can do this:

See God's presence in difficulties. When we come alongside fellow believers, we can help them lift their focus from their circumstances and begin to view their trials as opportunities for spiritual pruning, growth, and discovery.

Become personally involved. Exhortation is best received through face-to-face meetings because the other person sees our care and concern. Furthermore, when we observe his or her response, the insight we gain helps us to understand the heart issues and perceive which biblical principles to apply.

Be teachable. In helping others grow toward spiritual maturity, we too must be willing to make changes in our own life, because we can't pass wisdom on to others unless we're pursuing it ourselves.

We've been entrusted with these responsibilities. Therefore, we must ground ourselves in scriptural truth so we can give wise guidance to others.

Gift of Exhortation

Daily Devotional - Tuesday, December 4, 2018 - The Gift of Exhortation

Romans 12:3-8

TUESDAY

The church is filled with people who have different passions and interests. Christ designed His body to function this way by supplying various spiritual gifts by which His work is accomplished. Yet sometimes these differences can lead to misunderstandings because we each see through the lens of our own gift.

Exhortation is one of those spiritual gifts that can be misconstrued. People with this gifting may use strong words to urge fellow believers toward spiritual maturity. Sometimes this involves identifying foundational problems like pride, selfishness, or a desire for control and prescribing corrective steps based on biblical principles. Other times, exhortation may include an explanation of the blessings of obeying the Lord as well as warnings about the consequences of disobedience.

You may have noticed this gift is often given to pastors who regularly exhort God's people from the pulpit, but there are also individuals in the congregation who may have this spiritual gift. As Christians, we need to hear the truth about ourselves and how we are living, yet sometimes we may be resistant. Perhaps we think the exhorter has oversimplified our situation or is trying to "help" God out. Or maybe the way in which the advice is given strikes us as overconfident. At other times, we may question how Scripture is applied or doubt the genuineness of the one who exhorts us.

Although we should always compare what we hear with God's Word, we must not reject correction simply because we don't want to hear it. Wisdom comes with careful consideration of counsel as we hold firmly to the Word.

Daily Devotional - Monday, December 3, 2018 - Become Slaves of Righteousness

DECEMBER 03RD 2018 BY DEE LOFLIN

Daily Devotional - Monday, December 3, 2018 - Become Slaves of Righteousness

Romans 6:15-23

What comes to mind when you hear the word freedom? It's usually associated with the right to live as we please and to pursue ambitions and dreams. But in reality, living for self is never freedom. When Paul said, "You are slaves of the one whom you obey" (Rom. 6:16), he was pointing out we have a choice of either sin or righteousness. So if we aren't living for Christ, we'll find ourselves enslaved to sinful desires, habits, attitudes, and thoughts.

God wants to free us from every form of bondage that prevents us from becoming the person He created us to be. This kind of freedom is not achieved by war but by the knowledge of truth and submission to Christ.

If you're having trouble overcoming a particular sin despite repeated confession and repentance, there may be an underlying root fueling that sin. It doesn't matter how many times you cut off the sinful fruit; if the root remains, it'll produce a new poisonous outgrowth. And at times those roots spring from harmful emotions like anger, jealousy, bitterness, unforgiveness, or worry.

Instead of allowing such emotions to control us, we must let God's truths fill our mind and influence our behavior. When we were saved, Christ freed us from the dominion of sin and gave us His Spirit to empower us to live righteously. On top of that, God has given us a new nature created in Christ's likeness (Eph. 4:24). Therefore, we're to consider ourselves dead to sin but alive to Christ (Rom. 6:11) and should present ourselves to God for obedience (Rom. 6:13). Remember, God has given us everything we need to live righteously for Him, so believers are never helpless victims of sin.
